Male Impersonator Featured in
"Satan's Holiday" Paramount Stage Revue

Kitty Doner, headlining in "Satan's Holiday," the revue now playing the Paramount, is hailed as the legitimate success or of Vesta Tilley, for many years known as "The London Idol."

One of the greatest thrills Miss Doner got in her theatrical career was when one of the Cleveland critics gave his opinion of her work as a vaudeville headliner. He was chatting in her dressing room to the star and her mother. Turning to the latter, he said: "Mrs. Doner, I believe Kitty is a vest-pocket edition of Vesta Tilley and really her successor as a male impersonator."

Tears sprung into Mrs. Doner's eyes. The critic was somewhat perturbed and asked what had caused the mother's emotion.

"You've made me very happy," replied Kitty Doner's mother. "I played for six years with Vesta Tilley in England and your opinion of Kitty means so much to me. I know exactly what your criticisms means."

Larry Rich appears with Miss Doner as master of ceremonies. Others on the bill are Bertolino and Bee and Ray Goman in a comedy and dance specialty, and Neva Christman, acrobatic dancer.
